Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a light emitting diode device, and more particularly, to a light emitting diode device having a reflective surface. 2. Discussion of the Background Generally, a light emitting diode device is a semiconductor device capable of emitting various colors such as red, green, or blue light based on recombination of electrons and holes. The light emitting diode device is used as a light source. The light emitting diode device mainly includes a light emitting diode chip mounted on a substrate. The light emitting diode chip emits light based on supply of electricity. Light emitted from the light emitting diode chip is emitted toward the substrate, and light reflected by the substrate is emitted from the light emitting diode chip. However, light emitted from the light emitting diode chip is emitted in all directions and is not effectively used. The conventional light emitting diode device has a low light-

Siglos Karaoke Professional 2.0 7 is an amazing software to play and record karaoke mp3 files.. serial.The present invention relates to a semiconductor device and more particularly to the structure of an insulating film formed between a contact plug and a semiconductor substrate, the contact plug being formed by filling the via hole formed in an interlayer dielectric film by a metallic material, such as tungsten (W). Recently, as the integration of a semiconductor device increases, the space between contact holes to be formed in the interlayer dielectric film between the contact plugs becomes smaller. The higher integration of the semiconductor device causes the aspect ratio (the ratio of the depth of a contact hole to the diameter of the contact hole) of the contact hole to become higher. There is a problem, however, that, when the aspect ratio of the contact hole is high, when a barrier metal film formed between the contact plug and the interlayer dielectric film is planarized by chemical-mechanical polishing (CMP), it is difficult to completely flatten the surface of the contact plug. That is, in a usual chemical-mechanical polishing apparatus, a polishing pad is brought into contact with a semiconductor wafer and a slurry is supplied between the wafer and the pad so that the surface of the wafer is polished by a combination of a chemical polishing action and a physical polishing action by abrasive of the slurry. The higher the aspect ratio of the contact hole, the less the diameter of particles of the slurry, that is, the less the strength of the polishing force. When the contact hole is formed at a depth higher than the diameter of the polishing pad, the polishing pad is pressed to contact the bottom surface of the contact hole. However, when the contact hole is formed at a depth lower than the diameter of the polishing pad, the polishing pad does not press to contact
