I'm reading the Oracle documentation on enabling database users and noticed that they say one should grant to database users access to the privileges they need. If you already granted database privileges but now the database user wants to access the specific table or procedure they didn't have access to, you get this:

ORA-06512: at "SYS.DBMS_SECURITY", line 947
ORA-04088: error during execution of trigger
'SYS.CONSTRAINED_ALL_TRIGGERS' in package
'SYS' That is all clear to me. But why don't they use the built-in user lacks privilege error?
Example: GRANT DELETE, INSERT, SELECT,
UPDATE, USAGE on MY_TABLE to MY_DB_USER;
Selecting from MY_TABLE returns: OR
